This time of year, on the cusp of spring, its a good news/bad news situation. The good news is that there are hopeful signs of spring and warmer temperatures on the horizon with the bad news being that they aren't quite here yet. Despite that, there are still lots of ways to get your fiber fix. I was excited to see the registration forms and complete list of activities for Colorado Weavers Day at the February meeting. Registration forms can be printed from the Handweavers Guild of Boulder website: <http://www.handweaversofboulder.org/cwd/coweda-regform.pdf> The complete program brochure can be found at: <http://www.handweaversofboulder.org/cwd/coweda-brochure.pdf>

Doreen McLaughlin graciously volunteered to again coordinate guild table(s) for PPWG at Colorado Weavers Day. She is counting on your support in the way of handwoven items for display and artistic assistance with displaying them. From all the buzz I've been hearing, there are a lot of PPWG members that plan to attend; please contact Doreen to let her know what you plan to have for display.

Don't forget that the bi-annual international conference sponsored by the Handweavers Guild of America is happening this summer in Albuquerque, certainly an easy drive from the Pikes Peak region. Check out all the workshops, speakers and other activities at: <http://www.weavespindye.org/>

Having done some weaving that involves felting, I can't wait to hear Anne Vickrey Evans talk about the subject of felting at the March meeting. If you aren't familiar with Anne's experience and credentials, check out the web site for her business, FeltCrafts at <http://www.feltcrafts.com/about.htm>

See you in March!
